The Piazza Mosaic

Located at the heart of Piazza Square, this is one of Europe's largest figurative marble mosaics — 106 m² of hand-assembled marble tiles, designed by Georgian-Swiss artist Natali De Pita-Amirejibi in 2010.

Crafted from marble collected across 15 countries, the mosaic tells the story of eternal movement — inspired by maritime energy and the flow of urban life.

“A story of movement,
created in stone.”

An aerial photograph of Piazza Batumi in Georgia. The central feature is the tall, ornate clock tower with a golden, pyramidal roof. The square is surrounded by a dense collection of buildings with red-tiled roofs. To the right, a church with two golden domes is visible. The foreground shows a paved area with some outdoor seating. The overall scene is a vibrant, historic urban landscape.
